

NORTHEAST HIGH SCHOOL
1601 Cottman Ave
Philadelphia, Pa 19111

December 4, 2017

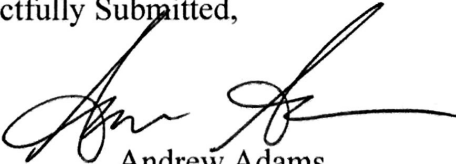

To Whom It May Concern:

Detail oriented, motivated, enthusiastic, reflective- Eleanor Forstater completed her student teaching in my history classes at Northeast High School in Philadelphia, PA from September –December 2017. During her time here, Eleanor taught eleventh and twelfth grade students with a variety of skill levels including students above grade level, on grade level and below grade level. Yet Eleanor designed lessons to reach this diverse, urban population.

Eleanor worked tirelessly to be an adept teacher; she reflected daily on the lessons she taught and thought about ways to improve her teaching in order to provide the best education possible. Eleanor's work ethic and dedication to her students impressed all who came in contact with her. She held both herself and her students to the highest standards of excellence. It was impressive to see Eleanor working to challenge her students without frustrating them all while maintaining high levels of engagement in the classroom.

During her time at Northeast, Eleanor's students greatly benefited from her sound judgment and thoughtful teaching. In addition to her excellent teaching, Eleanor also brought with her experience from a previous career as Carriage Driver that added a maturity, extemporaneous history knowledge and thoughtfulness to her classroom instruction. I am happy to give Eleanor my recommendation to any school for which she may apply. She will surely be an asset to any school community. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to reach me at ajadams@philasd.org.

Respectfully Submitted,

Andrew Adams